A full report of the meeting held to day at the Chamber of Commerce will be found in our local columns.

The Exchange Market throughout the week has been working very close, and it has been only by mutual accommodations between bankers that the demand bas been supplied without recourse to correctly shipments. The simust total stagnation in the Cotton market has of course brought shout this result. Rates have varied with the necessities of the buyer. While some banks retain their old rate of se discount, buying, others are abxious to purchase at le discount.
